RE: Sirius Merger

Dear Mr. Martin:

It is so damaging to both companies that there has been no decision concerning the survival of the merger between Sirius and XM, as is reflected in their stocks. People are beginning to look at terrestrial radio congressmen for using you to hold up the decision until that damage is beyond repair. From an emerging technical standpoint if you do not allow the union it will be profoundly devastating because of emerging satellite technology that has been created by the Germans/BMW Corp and The European Space Administration. This technology will allow for the micro bursting of large amounts of data and compress it in to a construct that will make it beyond the pail of these two companies to compete. They are having a hard time as it it....BMW will be able to lease satellite space that would normally cost billions and lease it for just over a million per year. The impact on a two company American system will cause XM to immediately go bankrupt....I honestly believe that if the merger is not approved it will happen anyway..

Sincerely,

Patrick Rodgers
